Dear Mr. Borris:

Attached please find the updated list of the 294 consumer complaints filed with the Center for Auto Safety (CAS) on Chrysler Totally Integrated Power Module (TIPM) issues. Full complaints may be viewed by clicking on the "View" link in the far left column of the electronic version of this letter.

The following complaints are selected from the most recent supplement to our complaints list, and highlight problems that continue to appear in TIPM vehicles:

Drove vehicle about two blocks at less than 25 mph when all lights, dash lights, windshield wipers, windshield washers, radio, alarm, and automatic door locks turned on or engaged. I pulled over, shut off the vehicle, removed the keys, but all of the lights, systems, alarm, etc., continued to operate. Smoke began rising from the hood, and I attempted to exit the vehicle. The door locks kept engaging and locking me in the car, even though I tried to pull on the manual door lock button. I was able to reach out the window to manipulate the exterior door handle in conjunction with the lock enough times that the door popped open. As I exited the vehicle, flames began to shoot from under the hood. Within four minutes, the vehicle was entirely engulfed in flames. The car and the contents are a total loss. It was fortunate that the weather was nice enough to drive with the window open, or I would have had to kick out the window to exit the vehicle. Very traumatic.

- Catherine Mohar, North Los Vegas, NV

I haven't received an estimate for the damages yet. On January 16, 2015 while leaving a parking lot, most of the electrical components on my 2008 Jeep Wrangler began to go haywire (horn blaring, wipers came on, windshield fluid began spraying, radio cut on and off, A/C heat cut on and off, locks were locking and unlocking). I removed my keys from the ignition and these problems continued, it was like my vehicle was possessed!! I then began to smell burning plastic and noticed flames/smoke coming out from under the hood on the passenger side of the car. I quickly opened the hood and noticed flames coming from under the fuse box (TIPM) and some of the wires were on fire. Fortunately I was able to extinguish the fire before the car was a total loss but unfortunately I lost the ability to drive it.

- Mark Haren, Cornelius, NC

My 2011 Jeep Wrangler has major electrical problems. The windshield wipers wouldn't turn off even after shutting off the engine. I pulled the fuse but they still stayed on. I could smell something electrical burning so I had to disconnect the battery. Also the door locks don't work and front cigarette lighter stopped working. I called the dealer and made an appointment to bring it in. While driving to the dealer the Jeep started to shake horribly when accelerating (due to electrical issues with the fuel pump). The dealer says that I need a new Totally Integrated Power Control Module (Tipm). The cost is well over $1000 (the vehicle is out of warranty). When I searched Tipm problems on-line I found that Chrysler has tons of complaints about this but the only issued a recall on a few vehicle models and Wrangler wasn't included. There are obviously a bigger number of vehicles affected and Chrysler should recall the remaining models.

- Lisa Buchter, Copiague, NY

THIS IS A REPEAT PROBLEM SINCE JANUARY 2011. problem still not solved. I keep bringing into the dealership. It has been towed, driven, etc. Data recorder. New ignition installed, new wires installed, relay switch installed now they want to try to replace the fuel pump. They are just guessing they have no solution to this problem. Time to go drive my death trap....doesn't start sometimes, and they can't figure that out...TODAY, while I was sitting in traffic on 95 my jeep just accelerated out of no where; and I had to slam on the brake and skid off the highway to avoid hitting another vehicle. Now i have no headlights, and no turn signals. No digital speedometer, thankfully, cars still have the traditional speedometer. Lets see what happens this time around. Your right Route 1 Jeep there is nothing wrong with my vehicle and its safe to drive...maybe Chrysler will get there act together and learn from GM! Reading me instructions on how to pull my car off the road in case of engine shut down is UNACCEPTABLE! How do i handle the sudden acceleration and lack of blinkers and lights?

- Farrah Johnson, Ewing, NJ

Pretty much all my electrical components on my steering wheel do not work. My blinkers don't work. My head lights and wipers stay on regardless the position. I have had to remove the fuse just so I can drive. and the head lights now will not even turn off. My display fades and brightens while I drive.. My alarm goes off every 10 minutes without anyone even touching it. So I have had to remove that fuse. my horn randomly goes off while I am driving. it is ridiculous how I am riding a rigged vehicle just to get from point a to point b. I need it to be fixed I am going on just barely my first year owning this car and it has literally been hell. I can't even feel safe driving it because my airbag light doesn't even go off meaning my airbags may or may not deploy in a accident. Ridiculous

- Hannah Marshall, Houston, TX

I was driving the vehicle on the freeway at about 68 mph when the airbag warning light came on. Then about three minutes after the airbag light came on, the vehicle indicated that the rear passenger door was open (which it was not). At this moment the side curtain passenger airbag deployed, which almost caused me to crash. Basically, the passenger side-curtain airbag deployed for no reason.

- Teresa Pacheco, Pueblo, CO

On 3/5/15 at 7:40 am. I was taking my son to school and I noticed the window wipers were actually back and forth then smoke from underneath the horn bezel and then the airbag deploys smoke fills up the cab the airbag hit me in my left hand and burns my left hand my son is in the back seat he jumps into the 3rd row seat because of the explosion and I almost get into an accident because I can't see out my windshield I'm rolling down the window trying to get all the smoke out of the cab of the vehicle and traffic is continuing to pass me as I'm in the right lane trying to get over take my son to school. I took the vehicle to Larry Miller Chrysler to drop the vehicle off they told me that I needed to call my insurance company or that I would be paying out of pocket for the repairs I ended up calling Chrysler opening a case with Chrysler they told me that they would look into it its been about 5 days now without a vehicle I've asked the dealership and Chrysler for a loaner car because I have 5 children I have to drive around also I don't have any medical insurance so I can't go to the doctor.

- Ryan Sykes, Thornton, CO

On December 10, 2014, my check engine light came on. I drove my 2008 Grand Caravan SXT (140,000 miles on it) to the local parts dealer and performed a diagnostic. The code indicated that there was an issue with my TIPM. I called the dealership, explained the issue and scheduled an appointment for a full diagnostic. Nothing found. The code did not pop up on their system. On December 11, 2014 I walked to the parking lot to find my van acting totally crazy (the "Poltergeist"). The horn was honking, windshield wipers were going full speed, windshield washer fluid was spraying everywhere and the internal and external lights were flashing. I attempted to use my key fob to unlock the doors but it did not work. I manually entered the van in hopes that starting the van would stop the Poltergeist. The van would not start. After about 20 minutes, all that remained was a soft horn constantly honking and the lights sporadically flashing. I hit the unlock button on the key fob – the horn honked loudly. I hit the lock button on the key fob – the washer fluid sprayed. I called a tow truck and they jump started the van. I drove it home with no additional problems. I had the battery replaced the next day assuming that they may be the issue.

Unfortunately, no. Four days later, as I was driving home, at night, the Poltergeist return with all the events described herein reoccurring. Again, as I was driving. I made it home and pulled into the garage, turned "off" the van and pulled the key fob out of the ignition. The van remained running. I had the key fob in my hand and I backed the van right back out of the garage and drove it to the dealership with the Poltergeist slowing down to nothing.

As I was talking to the service guy, the van is now completely turned off but all of a sudden, out of nowhere, the Poltergeist returned at full blast again. Luckily, I felt, in front of the service technician. To get it to stop, they unplugged the battery.

Two weeks later the van was returned to me. They could not locate the problem. The events did not reoccur. I explained to the dealership what I was reading online and they indicated that they found nothing of the sort in the Chrysler "star cases." I presented the service tech with a copy of the material I printed off the internet, it was disregarded. I paid the $100 deductible (I have a lifetime warranty) and hoped for the best.

Two days later, the ABS light, emergency brake light, traction light and one other indicator light appeared on my dashboard (the "Light Indicators"). Completely strange as I was driving the van at the time. Then, my abs brakes slightly engaged, again as I was driving, without my foot on the brake pedal. I called another dealership and drove the van to them in hopes they could solve the problem. Two weeks later, the Poltergeist did not reappear and I paid my $100 deductible, picked up my van and hoped again for the best.

I had no additional problems until February 20, 2015 when the Light Indicators appeared back on my dashboard. I turned my van off in hopes that would reset everything. It did not. I drove the van to the dealership, showed them the dashboard and asked them what I should do. They ran a quick diagnostic and the code read faulty ABS module. We set an appointment (as they were booked) and I drove the van home with the Light Indicators still on. No additional problems occurred for the next three days. On the fourth day, the Poltergeist returned. It ended after a few minutes. I brought the van to the dealership at my scheduled time, let them know that the Poltergeist returned and hoped for the best. This was yesterday. I picked up the van yesterday evening, was told that the ABS module indicator did not reappear and that unless I could provide some proof of "the Problem" they would like me not to bring the van back to them as it was costing them a lot of labor due to the Warranty. It seems that Chrysler will not reimburse a dealership for labor expenses UNLESS a part is replaced.

I am now dumbfounded on what to do next. Please help. This appears to be a problem that is not being addressed.

- Alicia Jelliff, Waite Park, MN

Driving at highway speeds, vehicle will lose power and stall out, this happened three times on 3-19-2015 on the interstate, it has to be turned off and the battery unhooked and reconnected before it will start back and have throttle response returned, this is a very dangerous situation and from what I see by searching the internet it also seems to be a common problem with these jeep models, I am just wondering why there hasn't been a recall on them yet. The transmission control cable was replaced because there was water inside it and it was freezing when the temperatures dropped below 32 F. In December 2014 the rear window powered up and rolled down of its own accord and wouldn't come back up, the only way to get the window back up was to manually apply power to the window motor and raise it back up then unhook the harness from the window's motor.

- Lisa Stiltner, Vansant, VA

On January 4th, while pulling into a neighbor's driveway, I tapped the brakes to stop (I was going less than 5mph, so I didn't need to press hard) the engine suddenly accelerated hard. I immediately slammed on the brakes harder to stop the acceleration, and my van ended up five to ten feet in my neighbor's yard. Two weeks later, I was pulling into a parking space at my son's work. I was moving slow and straightening the wheel approximately two to three feet from the sidewalk curb, when the engine acceleration surged and my van lurched forward. I again slammed on the brakes in order to not slam into the building wall just past the sidewalk, The van stopped on top of the sidewalk after hitting the car parked next to my van (as my wheels were still turned from turning into the parking space. The damage to my van and the car hit by my van totaled over $10,000. If a pedestrian had been on the sidewalk in front of my van, they would have been seriously injured or killed. Both times the engine unexpectedly surged, my foot was on the brake, and the van was traveling less than 2 to 3 miles per hour. When the acceleration surged the van forward, it was extremely hard and fast as if the accelerator had been pounded to the floorboard. I have checked with my local Dodge dealer, who states there is no problem with this van and they have had absolutely no complaints about unexpected and powerful acceleration on the Dodge Grand Caravan. I find this hard to believe as there are many other reports on Dodge Forum Boards stating this exact unexpected and dangerous acceleration. I am afraid to drive my 2012 Dodge Grand Caravan. My 2012 Dodge Grand Caravan is a little over two years old and has 32,000 miles. I took my van to the Freehold Dodge Dealer in my town, but the service manager says they have absolutely no complaints of this nature on the Dodge Grand Caravan, and after checking my van for "computer codes", he finds nothing wrong with the vehicle. Until now I loved my Grand Caravan -- now I am afraid to drive it. I want to know what accelerator sensor or computer module needs to be replaced in order to correct this dangerous defect. This may be the TIPM.

- Gayle Anderson, Howell, NJ

Ram 1500: I was traveling at freeway speeds in the middle lane in very heavy traffic when I thought some body had rear ended me. There was a loud booming grinding sound as the truck jerked violently followed by my truck instantly dropping my speed to around 30 mph. Now I was in danger being in the center lane and going so slow. I managed somehow to quickly get off onto the shoulder of the road, compose myself and try to figure out what had just happened. My dash light started flashing and my truck was forced into 4wl (four wheel low) causing much drive train damage I later found out. Almost two years later and thousands of dollars out of pocket for me on warranty defects my truck still has not been repaired and continues to go into 4wl when ever wants to. Chrysler considers my case closed when nothing has been fixed. Other complaints cite TIPM as cause.

I purchased a 2011 Dodge Durango in November of 2012. When I purchased the vehicle it only had about 24,000 miles on it. A couple of months after I got it, I was going down the road and the RPMs went crazy. My engine was revving up, but the vehicle was stalled. I had to put it in neutral, then put it in drive to get the transmission to change gear. Since that time, I have had this same problem occur on at least 5 other occasions. The latest incident was on Saturday, 3/7/2015. The RPMs were going crazy as if I was gunning the vehicle. The vehicle did not stall, but it was barely moving. I had to stop, put it in neutral, and then put it back in drive. It drove fine after that, but I should not have to stop my vehicle on a public road to get the transmission to change gears. I am very concerned that my vehicle will stall, causing a wreck. I am surprised this problem has not resulted in an accident yet. My vehicle does not even have 52,000 miles on it, and there is no excuse for the transmission problems. The Durango is the only vehicle my family owns, so if the transmission fails, we will have no way to go anywhere. I do not have the money to get the transmission looked at, much less to get the part(s) that may be required to repair the problem. I want a reliable vehicle that I can feel safe driving.

I have had (3) separate vehicle electronic control module failures resulting in the vehicle shutting off while driving in the middle of the highway or road. Several times I was able to restart the vehicle after an hour on the side of the road, but twice I had to have the vehicle towed to the dealer. Only (1) recall has been paid for for installing a relay switch. The next day the car died again while driving and they said it was another unrelated ignition switch and charged me $350.00. On 3/5/2015 while driving on I-85 expressway in Atlanta the vehicle just shut off in the middle of the highway. I managed to get to the breakdown lane due to it being 12noon. After 25 minutes I got it restarted, then 30 minutes later it shut down again in the middle of a 45 MPH road and would not restart, smoke started coming from the hood and I thought the Durango was on fire. A policeman came to my rescue and called a tow truck who towed the 2011 Durango to the dealer. It's been there since last Thursday and they have not fully diagnosed the problem yet, but someone is going to get killed in these vehicles just like with the GM cars if something is not done. A vehicle just shutting off on the road with no warning is extremely dangerous. It seem like they keep making the cheapest recalls when obviously the entire control module needs replacement. The dealer told me Saturday that the electronic starter burned out, that's why the smoke came from the hood, but they are not sure it's related to any other issue.
